The Stanley C. and Selma D. Hollander Faculty Book Collection was established by the MSU Libraries in 1998 to recognize and honor the scholarly work of MSU faculty members who have written, edited, or translated a book or musical score; contributed to a multimedia work; or participated in a professionally recorded musical performance.

Materials for the Stanley C. and Selma D. Hollander Faculty Book Collection are purchased, in part, with funds from the Robert S. and Harriett R. Spira Library Endowment and the Stanley C. and Selma D. Hollander Faculty Book Collection Endowment.

Titles for the collection are identified by the subject librarians who serve as liaisons to MSU colleges and departments, and through extensive database searches using current lists of MSU faculty provided by the university. Works by retired faculty and by academic staff are included whenever they are identified.

Authors with new works published in 2018 are listed in this booklet and are our honored guests at the MSU Faculty Authors’ Reception for 2019.

Mathematical Discourse That Breaks Barriers and Creates Space for Marginalized Learners (Sense Publishers, 2018)
Partnering to Advance the Research and Land-Grant Missions of MSU

It is both an honor and a privilege to recognize the faculty of Michigan State University through the Faculty Book Collection and its annual celebration. It is also gratifying to present the work of our colleagues within the context of a world-class research library collection developed over the course of the history of the first land-grant university in the United States. It is, therefore, the collection at the heart of research conducted on campuses, in businesses, and in homes throughout the state of Michigan.

Over the last several years, the MSU Libraries has increased its role as a partner in the research and land-grant missions of this great institution. It has long been common to find an expression of gratitude to a librarian, library service, or a department within the acknowledgements of a major work by MSU faculty or in the dissertation of a recent Ph.D. graduate. Although this valued partnership continues, our roles are expanding. In addition to helping find and analyze resources, librarians are increasingly co-authoring with their faculty colleagues or on research teams, contributing literature reviews, data management plans, and digital scholarship methodologies.

We continue to develop new services, resources, and facilities to meet these needs. The most prominent is the Digital Scholarship Lab, which is finishing its first full year of operation. This innovative lab was developed through several campus partnerships, most notably between the College of Arts and Letters and the MSU Libraries. It offers faculty and students the technology, space, and expertise that they need to pursue scholarship that is enhanced through digital technology or methodologies—or to pursue research on the impact of digital technology in their own discipline. In this space, library faculty and staff are true partners in research and scholarship—and help to facilitate further disciplinary partnerships as well.

Research data management, a related but separate service, also continues to grow. The Libraries have developed expertise in managing research data and data sharing among research teams. Although this is often associated with meeting federal funding mandates, research data management also allows researchers to most effectively share data during process and into the future. We partner to make their research easier to conduct, easier to share, and in some cases, possible to fund!

New services and expertise allow us to partner with university faculty earlier in the research and scholarly communication processes; however, we take our traditional role of sharing the results of research very seriously. The Faculty Book Collection is one of several curated and special collections in the MSU Libraries for which we enjoy a national reputation. Faculty research joins curated and special collections that include the Africana, LGBTQ+, Ethnic Studies, Comic Art, Cookery, Radicalism, and Zines collections to name a few.

In addition to our pride in these collections of distinction, we are most proud of the library faculty and staff whose deep expertise make them possible. Every aspect of these collections—including their curation, the purchase or acquisition of their materials, their preservation, and the use of them in the classroom or by researchers—requires expertise by many library faculty and staff throughout the MSU Libraries.

As part of our land-grant mission, we at the MSU Libraries always seek ways to share that expertise and the collections that we have built with the campus and larger communities. In keeping with that goal, we are delighted to launch a program this year to facilitate use of these collections by visiting researchers. Through the generous support of our donors, we have developed an annual program in which interested scholars can apply for travel stipends to conduct research each summer.

It is a true honor to add the research and scholarship of MSU faculty to these curated and special collections—and to mark the occasion with a celebration each year. Nothing could be more worth celebrating on the campus of our premier land-grant university than the advancement of knowledge.
